Bearing Them Cheerfully

They were in the train and the sad and sad faced man was full of philosophy.

Everyone yawned except the professional-looking man with the clean shaven face and the public. The remark seemed to cheer him up. It is to be expected that he is a professional.

RARE GEMS STOLEN

James Scott Jeweller's Shop in Paris a theft of about $100,000 worth of jewelry was carried out with extraordinary daring and in less than a minute in a jeweller's shop at the corner of the Place de l'Opera in Paris early yesterday morning.

A footlocker, into the drawer of which were placed the jewels, was taken from the shop of M. de la Roche, the jeweller, who is a French Jew. The jewels were taken from the premises of the shop in the morning. The jewels were taken from the premises of the shop in the morning. The jewels were taken from the premises of the shop in the morning.

The opportunity came when a French Jew, who is a French Jew, was taken from the premises of the shop in the morning. The jewels were taken from the premises of the shop in the morning. The jewels were taken from the premises of the shop in the morning.

Whether the theory be true or not there is no doubt that the thief got away with his valuable ring and a diamond necklace and other jewels. The jewels were taken from the premises of the shop in the morning. The jewels were taken from the premises of the shop in the morning.

FRIDAY, JAN. 10, 1913.

Councillor Hodge says that an investor should have been procured of just what the Realty Company and the Brick & Coal Company proposed to sell the town. Without trying to blame someone else for not getting this why did not he, as a member of the council, insist that it be done.

Councillor Hodge, who is addition to his other duties, has assumed the editorial chair, complains that the letter of the law was not lived up to in matter of posting notices for the election, although he admits that practically everybody who was in town and entitled to vote, did so. In our opinion his complaint is rather far fetched.
